EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

The lord mayor of London draws a salary of $50,000 and spends one fourth of it on the first day of his term.

The friends of Sergeant Mason are again agitating for his pardon. We suppose it will be safe to let him go now.

France would be glad to see Germany undertake to help Egypt. She would then endeavor to get her loved and lost provinces back.

The most flourishing industry of the country at this particular time is base ball. It is being worked for all it is worth—and a good deal more.

The Republican State Committee has risen to the occasion. Its spirit of concession and fair play will be hailed with gladness by the Republican masses.

In a little while the poor man can afford to eat potatoes again. The indications are that this year's crop will be abundant and good. This will be joyful news to many.

It has been wisely decided to waste no more lives in hunting for the remains of Lieutenant Chipp and his party, who are almost certainly buried beneath the waves of the Arctic Ocean.

Some of of the iron in which they have wrought for so many years seems to have got into the backbones of the manufacturers and workingmen of Pittsburgh. Neither side will yield, they say, and the orderly manner in which everything is said and done is a very good evidence that they are not talking for talk's sake. It is a great misfortune that Pittsburgh has no man wise enough or great enough to reconcile these two contending forces, that ought never to have been disunited.

Nearly all the foreign correspondents of American newspapers are taking a turn at abusing M. Gambetta. They all agree that he has lost his influence and will amount to nothing in the future history of France. It may be presumptuous to disagree with these wise people. Still, there are those who believe that whenever France is ready to attack Germany Gambetta will come to the front. His place in history will be determined by the issue of that great conflict.

The Watchman continues to reiterate its most serious charge against General Beaver—that he is proud, aristocratic, etc. It is the most absurd of all charges—even if it were true—to have any weight with a voter. The truth is that General Beaver is one of the most affable, modest, social men of our acquaintance. We have often heard this remarked by perfectly uninterested persons. If he is cold and distant at times it is only toward those persons whose actions he holds in utter abhorrence. We know that he is much more socially disposed than the editor-in-chief of the Watchman, and when he meets an acquaintance on the street, no matter what his condition, is much quicker in recognizing and giving him a cheerful greeting.

"Squarely Cornered."

Under this caption the Philadelphia Bulletin reviews the action of the Republican state committee, and concludes that the Republican candidates have fairly and squarely put the Independent malcontents into a corner from which they have no loophole of escape. The whole state and the whole country is appealed to by the committee's action, in a way that challenges the approval of all honest men. The Republican party has gone far beyond any just demand upon it in its sincere endeavor to meet even the most unreasonable demands upon it. It has allowed a factious enemy to dictate terms of peace, following all the twistings and turnings of the Independents, as a parent sometimes follows the whims of a peevish, fractious child, and has agreed to those terms precisely as if the Independents had really been aggrieved in some way and had an honest cause for complaint. Conscious of its own rectitude in the whole course that has been pursued, the Republican party consents to submit its work to its members for their judgment. The candidates, one and all, declare themselves ready to go back to the people and ask if they approve of the ticket. They agree that the test shall be applied precisely according to the plan cut out by the Independent managers. There has been a great deal of sneering about "reform next year." The Republicans say: "No; we are ready for reform this year; now and just as you have prescribed it. We have faith in the people. Show us your faith without your works and we will show you our faith by our works." It is an unconditional acceptance of the Independents' plan for harmony.

The Independent leaders wrestled long and anxiously over the dilemma which this policy of honesty thrust upon them. Unwilling to believe that anybody was honest but themselves, they clung to the false theory that the Republican party was ruled by what they call, in the vulgar slang of the day, "bosses" and would not dare to act for itself. They proposed terms of adjustment which they thought they had made so extreme as to be impossible and, to their infinite chagrin and discomfiture, they find their terms accepted and now they are afraid to accept them for themselves. They do not dare to go before the people on their own terms. And they know that to refuse is to expose them to the indignant contempt of all honest men. They are caught in their own trap and they see no way out of it. There has been no trick played upon them. They have simply been invited, as honest men, to go to the voters of the party which they profess to represent and ask them which of the tickets does really represent them. If they accept, the voters of the party will take the whole question out of their hands and settle it for themselves; and this does not suit them, although it is exactly what they pretended to desire. If they refuse, they confess their insincerity and their fear of the people. They are between the upper and nether millstones of a fatal dilema, and it is all the worse because it is of their own making. Meantime, the Republican ticket is placed upon the lofty vantage ground of a free concession to the most unreasonable demands of its factious adversary. The people now see for themselves that every pretext for this independent movement is an empty and dishonest one, and therefore deserving of no consideration. The Independents may wriggle themselves into some new eleventh hour attitude of objection, in their desperate endeavor to maintain their faction fight; but they are swept away from all solid ground—if they ever had any under them—by the honest policy which has taken them at their word and proved that word to be an empty sham.

The action of the Republican candidate, and the state committee, could only have been taken by true Republicans, who believe in the people and are not afraid of them. It adds a bright and honorable chapter to the history of Pennsylvania politics, such as could be contributed by no other party or faction. There was no obligation to deal in this generous fashion with Senator Mitchell and his colleagues. There is absolutely no defect in the Republican ticket that needs to be cured. But the plain, honest voters of the state were being crammed with false allegations of men who are seeking to be their party rulers and who have been trying to make them believe that there had been something un-Republican about the convention and its ticket. And to dispel these false charges, the Republicans consent to send the whole question to the people themselves. The Independents refuse to abide by their own terms and accept the proposition which they declared was all they wanted; and it will not be easy to deceive the people longer by any device or excuse which they may contrive. They are fairly and squarely cornered and they must come out or surrender.

War in Egypt.

Early last week the British ships in the waters near Alexandria, the Egyptian capital, opened fire upon that city. For a short time a lively response was made from the forts and garrisons of the city, but soon all opposition to the steady British fire ceased and the city was at the mercy of her conquerors. The loss to the victors was slight, but that of the Egyptians is known to be heavy. The British are now in possession of the city. The causes which culminated in this battle are thus outlined by the Altoona Tribune:

"Egypt is nominally a dependency of Turkey. The khedive recognizes the sultan as his sovereign. The actual government has been in the hands of representatives of the bondholders, most of whom reside in England and France. The people who are very poor, are terribly oppressed by taxation, the payment of the interest on the debt and the expenses of the government requiring annually a large sum. This debt was contracted by Ismail Pacha, the late khedive, and the greater portion of it was caused by his lavish subscription to the building of the Suez canal. This canal is the great highway by which England keeps up communication with her East Indian possessions and is only incidentally valuable to Egypt. The Egyptians have grown restless under the double burden of foreign control and oppressive taxation, and have organized a national movement, the object of which is to drive the foreigners from power. The leader in this movement is Arabi Bey or Arabi Pacha as he is differently called, a soldier who has risen from the ranks to a commanding influence in the native army. England cannot afford, so her rulers think, to permit this national movement to succeed. She must control the Suez canal at all hazards. And so her fleets have turned their guns on the defenses of Alexandria and her soldiers are on the way to crush the national party. When hard pushed Egypt can put 120,000 soldiers in the field. England will take small account of such an army once she takes the offensive. Whatever direction one's sympathies may take it can scarcely be doubted that the Egyptians are doomed to disastrous defeat unless they secure the assistance of one of the great powers. At present this does not seem probable."

It is perfectly disgraceful for any government, we care not whether it be China, Japan or the U. S. of America—although the fact that the latter government is rich increases the disgrace—to issue such postal cards as are now in circulation. The edges are as rough as though whittled out with a common pocket knife, while the printing is done in such an execrable manner that the stamp off-sets on the back of the next card, giving it a soiled appearance. We are ashamed to send them out of the office lest our patrons will consider us responsible for the poor printing. The U. S. government will confer a favor by giving more attention to this department of its work in the future.

The proposed new territory of Pembina embraces all that portion of Dakota lying north of forty-sixth parallel.

Civil Service Facts.

On Thursday the 6th inst., the House at Washington took up the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill and Mr. Bayne, Independentent Republican of Pennsylvania, made it the text of an attack on "the Boss system in politics," with which the Independent Republicans are just now at war in Pennsylvania, and also on the President, whom he accused of an "effort to establish and maintain the spoils system." Mr. Bayne said: "He has removed many faithful and competent officers without cause and while in commission, thus not only violating his promise, but, as I believe, the constitution and law as well." He said that twenty-four internal revenue collectors had been removed from office presumably without just cause.

Mr. Bayne is one of the leaders of the Independent Republican movement in Pennsylvania, and it will be perceived that he does not speak in tones of compromise.

Mr. Kasson and Mr. Butterworth replied to Mr. Bayne, and the facts and figures given make some further explanation from Mr. Bayne useful. These figures show that Mr. Bayne's charges of wholesale removals from office without cause are singularly groundless, and that President Arthur has, in fact, made fewer changes in the civil service than probably any of his predecessors in recent times, certainly much fewer than President Garfield.

Mr. Bayne refused to go into details to prove his charge against the President. It was shown therefore:

First—That Mr. Arthur has made no removals at all in the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Indiana, Illinois, Tennessee, Michigan, Minnesota, Arkansas, Oregon and Nevada.

Second—He has made one removal in each of the States of New Jersey, Virginia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Colorada; and these in most cases were removed for cause.

Third—In the State of Pennsylvania, with several hundred Presidential appointments, he has made only five removals, of which three were for cause. That is the sum total for Mr. Bayne's own State. In New York there have been made by Mr. Arthur also only five removals, two of which were for cause.

Fourth—It was shown that out of 874 appointments made in nine months by Mr. Arthur, only 49 were removals; 428 were appointments, 446 were new appointments, to fill vacancies caused by death or disability or the expiration of the term of office.

Fifth—It was shown further, as Mr. Bayne spoke of General Garfield by contrast with Mr. Arthur, that in four months Garfield made 51 removals, against 49 for Mr. Arthur's nine months, and that of 266 appointments made by President Garfield only 88 were reappointments. Of General Garfield's appointments 23 per cent. were to replace removals from office; of Mr. Arthur's only 5-100 of 1 per cent.

Finally, as Mr. Bayne charged that there had been a change in policy in the matter of appointments by Mr. Arthur, it was shown that, of the nominations made by Gen. Garfield, but left unconfirmed at his decease, 85 were ratified by him.

The President has been slow to defend himself against such attacks as this of Mr. Bayne, but at the request of Mr. Kasson and other members they were put in possession of the above facts and figures, which leave Mr. Bayne no ground to stand on.

The crisis in the East is watched with anxiety by crowned heads of Europe. Probably they think that a foreign war might act as a counter irritant and put an end to social troubles.

They Dare not Refuse.

The Republican State Committee, we rejoice to say, met its duty in a wise and honorable spirit. With great unanimity, after frank discussion, it adopted broad measures for peace and harmony. The patriotic course of General Beaver and his associates happily prepared the way. In a manly and chivalrous letter, declaring their earnest desire for the reunion and success of the Republican party, they released the committee from all obligation to themselves, and urged it to seek a just settlement of Republican differences. With this freedom, the Committee proceeded to broad and comprehensive action.

It offers to the Independent Republican candidates and Committee four alternative propositions. The first is the submision of the Beaver and Stewart tickets to a vote of the Republican electors at primaries. The second is the selection of the party without limit by a popular vote of all Republicans, practically under the Crawford county system of a direct nomination by the people. The third is a new State Convention to be held on the 23d of August, under the new rules adopted by the Continental Peace Conference, and under the regulations and appointment of a committee consisting of Judge Agnew, Hampton L. Carson and Francis B. Reeves. The fourth is "a State Convention to be constituted as provided for by the new rules adopted by the late Republican State Convention."

All these measures are eminently just and wise, and the two latter embrace concessions so much greater than were expected—really, offering to undo all that had been done and putting the matter again into the hands of the people—that the Independents dare not refuse to accept one of them.

All doubts that the regular Republican ticket would win are dissipated by this wise action of the Committee, and the Independents may choose either to lend a helping hand in making this victory greater or bury themselves under eternal disgrace.

Some idea of the test Arabi's stone and mud walls had to stand may be judged by reflecting a moment on the sort of missiles thrown from the eighty-ton guns of the "Inflexible." From each of the four guns comprising her armament the "Inflexible" deals out a ball somewhat longer and but slightly narrower than an ordinary barrel! The bore of the gun is sixteen inches in diameter, and the projectile of chilled steel, sent with a velocity that will carry it four miles if unobstructed, or with penetrating power sufficient to cut through twenty-five inches of wrought iron at a mile range, and then burst with such murderous effect as the most savage form of other-day artillery never attained. These guns are fed and moved entirely by hydraulic engineering. The effect of one may be conceived if the reader will imagine a vessel in the Delaware sending a shot to West Philadelphia. The steel barrel would plough through all the intervening masonry from river to river, and explode at the point directed with sufficient force to obliterate all semblance of structure for blocks about. The working of these guns is not less wonderful than the effect of their prodigious missiles. One man can operate the loading with the slightest possible exertion, while the risks of ancient warfare are almost completely done away. With a fleet of Inflexibles, England can enter any harbor in christendom, in spite of the most heroic resistance.

It is pleasing to note that the average expenditure for strong drink of every man, woman and child in England has fallen from $29 in 1875 to $16 in 1881. The effect was seen in an immediate increase in the deposits in the savings banks, although these amounts do not yet reach to 10 per cent. of the money spent in liquor.

THE HOLLY TREE INN.

BY HON. FELIX BURNOT.

The holly strikes new roots to-night,
And wider still its branches trend,
As gathered friends with faces bright
Out from its shelter greetings send.
"Welcome" the motto of her walls,
The language of her open door;
Peaceful the pleasures of her halls,
And easy paid her tap-room score.

The glow that lights the chearful scene
No revel gilds with lurid glare,
Nor deadened pane nor latticed screen
Hides from the sight what passes there;
No mocker's glass, no cup of woe,
No grief, no tears, no oath of sin,
Nor widow's wail, nor murd'rer's blow,
No orgies mark the friendly inn.

The smiles that greet the entering guest
Here never sprang from sordid greed;
The poor, the rich, the sorrow-pressed
Alike find welcome in their need;
Not lucre moves the outstretched hand
When gentle woman seeks to save;
No "hope forlorn," or Spartan band
Was e'er so great, so good, so brave.

With hearts to sigh when others weep,
With words to cheer when hearts despond,
With ready feet the straying sheep
They follow, through the fold beyond;
The lost they seek, the lambs they feed,
The wanderers in the ways of sin
They sweetly call, they gently lead,
Like Him whose kingdom is an inn.

He finds the lost He came to seek;
He leads them home in leash of love,
The poor, the blind, the maimed, the weak,
By sin enchained, His pity move;
None casts He out who heed the call,
No suppliant who would fain be free;
His mansion's wide enough for all,
The guests you gather His may be.

THE EARLY RAIN.

Down through the misty air,
Down through the gloom above,
Falling, pattering everywhere,
The rain comes quick with love.
Softly the missel-thrush
Sings in the golden storm;
The robin under a laurel bush
Waits for to-morrow morn.

Drip, drip, drip, from the eaves,
Pit, pit, pit, on the pane,
Swish, swish, swish, on the drenched leaves,
List! 'tis the song of the rain.
Grasses are bending low,
Green is the corn and thick;
You can almost see the nettles grow,
They grow so strong and quick.

Soft is the wind from the west,
Softer the rain's low sigh;
The sparrow washes his smoky breast,
And watches the gloomy sky.
Stirred are the boughs by the breeze,
Scarcely a leaf is still;
Something is moving a ong the trees
Like a restless spirit of ill.

Standing watching the rain,
Do you not seem to hear
The voice of God outspeaking again
To man's ungrateful ear?
Promising plenty and peace,
Garners with treasures heaped,
That seed-time and harvest shall not cease,
Till the Harvest of Earth be reaped.

—While you are climbing up the mountain,
Dearest Rhoda,
I shall be standing near the fountain
Drinking soda,
While you are gazing raptly seaward,
Little dear,
You will find me sailing leeward
For a beer.

—To flirt with single fellows is a bore,
Unless they've other sweethearts to make sore.
But when you chance to catch a married one,
To flirt is naughty. Then it's lots of fun,
Especially if you can make his wife
So jealous that she's very tired of life.

—She can work a fancy screen
Just the nicest ever seen,
In a style that all her "culchahed" set enchants;
But my friend, 'twixt you and me,
It would chill a man to see
How she stitched a patch upon her old man's pants.

Our Story Teller.

Counting the Cost.

"Are you intending to buy a new sleigh this winter," asked a mechanic of Charles Wallace, as he met him on the street.

"I have not decided yet. Why?"

"I have some good ones on hand, and will sell you one at a bargain. Come and see them."

"If I conclude to purchase I will give you a call."

"I will give time, if you have not the money just now; can wait three or six months, if you like; glad to accommodate you."

"Well, I'll think about it."

Charles Wallace was a young man just started in life. He had bought a snug little farm, with a cozy cottage and good out-buildings, and brought his young wife there, to help him enjoy his new home. He paid eight hundred dollars down and gave a mortgage for the other thousand dollars to be paid in yearly installments of two hundred dollars principal, and interest on the remainder. Ellen had a little money that she had earned in teaching school, and she furnished the house, as far as she could without running into debt. She was a sensible girl, and preferred buying fifty sheep to furnishing the parlor. "It will not take long," she said, "for the sheep to bring money enough to buy a parlor set and carpet, and we shall have them growing all the time, and we can wait; our sitting-room is good enough." So when her husband came in and told her that Jones would sell him a sleigh and wait for his pay, she shook her head and looked grave.

"I would not do it, Charley. We shall not drive much this winter, and that old box sleigh of your father's will answer."

"You don't think I can afford it, I suppose?"

"You know that in three months there is two hundred dollars, besides sixty dollars interest, to be paid, which we must not fail to meet. Let us see where it is coming from before we agree to pay fifty dollars more for a new sleigh that we can get along without."

The young man looked rather serious, and ate his dinner very quietly. That evening he sat down by the stove while Ellen was clearing the table and said: "I reckon I shall have to give up the sleigh; I have been thinking over what you said at noon, and unless I sell off some of the stock, I cannot, for the life of me, see how I can raise the money for a payment on the farm, in three months."

"That has to be done, Charley, and we must not sell the stock either; it would be like killing the goose that laid the golden egg."

"Have you sent for your parlor furniture yet?"

"No, I was in no hurry; we should not use the room half a dozen times through the winter; so I put the wool money into the bank until I needed it."

"We had good luck with our poultry; that brought us one hundred and fifty dollars; but I have to pay some out of that. How large a store bill have we, do you suppose, Ellen?"

"I have no store bill, Charley, or any other bill to pay. I have sold eggs and butter for groceries."

"I owe something for nails; perhaps a dozen dollars or so."

"Then there is twenty-five dollars yet on the sewing machine."

"Yes; and is there not a balance due on the pigs, or have you paid it?"

"No; ten dollars there! And twenty dollars more on the colt; and say ten dollars to the blacksmith?"

"Anything else that you can think of, Charley?"

"My boots! Three and a half! Let me see, it seems as if there was something more. Yes, you know I got a meat barrel and a water tub; six more."

"It will take about all the poultry money to pay these bills, and I would pay them right away."

"They ought to be paid, sure! But Ellen, where will the money come from to take up the first note?"

"You have some grain to sell, unless you conclude to feed the lambs and fat them for market."

"They are yours. It would pay to fatten them."

"No, we are going to pay for the farm, whether the parlor is ever furnished or not, and, Charley, we will keep out of debt, if possible, for the future."

"I did not suppose I was owing so much."

"Little debts count up fast, and it does not take long to make them large. I hope you will settle them all up right away, so as to begin a free man. A man in debt is a slave to his creditor."

"Suppose we get a hundred dollars for the lambs; how in the name of goodness are we going to raise the other hundred and sixty dollars?"

"There is the money for the wool, and fifty dollars of the butter money, and I reckon, Charley, you can earn twenty or thirty dollars in three months."

"But, Ellen, you want a new dress or two."

"No, thank you, I am very well off now. You never asked me what I did with the money that you gave me when your checks came for the butter, and as I did not need it for household expenses, I thought it best to save it to help pay off the mortgage, for I am in a hurry to get that off our home, so that we can feel independent."

"You are a dear little prudent woman, and I am as happy as I can be to see my way clear!"

"As happy as if you were riding in Jones' new sleigh with a lien on it?"

"If you had said one word in favor of it, I should have bought it Ellen; I had not thought."

"Then there would have been another debt to pay! We can live just as happy to ride in the box sleigh till we are really able to have a better one, and we shall feel better by a fifty dollar bill next spring."

The next day Jones saw Wallace and urged him to buy one of his new sleighs.

"No," he replied, "I am not intending to buy a new one this season."

"If I had done as well as you have this year," said the other, "I would have a handsome turnout to give my wife a ride in once in a while."

"My wife would not enjoy a ride in a sleigh that was not paid for, and I shall not buy one till I can pay for it. I am going to pay for my farm and home before I dash out in much style, and my wife feels as I do about it."

That night Jones was in the store, and made the remark that Charles Wallace would be a rich man by the time he was forty, for he had a sensible woman for a wife, and he had common sense himself. — Farmer's Wife in Country Gentleman.

MISFORTUNE never comes singly The unfortunate inhabitants of the little town of Malcolm in Iowa were hardly allowed time to collect the remnants of their property and to make their arrangements for the future, when another tornado bore down upon them, and what the former storm had spared has now been demolished. The destruction is now said to be complete, and the distracted citizens are at a loss to know which way to turn. The West is a great country and a good place to grow up in, but its climate is not everything that could be desired.

After the Fourth: "Gracious, how terribly small these buttonholes are," remarked Mr. Smiley as he was vainly endeavoring to button on his collar this morning. "Hannah, come here. This ain't skew gee, at all." "Oh, skew gee, or what not," replied Hannah. "How can you expect to use a cuff button as big as a moulding board to fasten your collar with. You aren't skew gee yourself." Muttering something about "things all mixed up on the bureau," the old gentleman finally fixed himself up in time for breakfast.

The little end of the horn: "Uncle Simon," exclaimed a boy in breathless haste, rushing into a shop, "did yer heah dat yer wife has dun run away wid a barber?" "No, chile, am it a fack?" "Yas, sah. She run away. Da was in sich a hurry dat de barber lef' his hat in de house." "Well, I'se glad he lef' his hat, fur it makes me de gainer in de transaction." "But he come back an' tuck de bat, den run away an' lef' yer wife in de house." "Oh, Lord," exclaimed the old man, "den I'se de loser in the transaction."

LINCOLN'S MOTHER.

Interesting Story of Her Death—Love Borne by the Statesman for His Aged Parent—The Log-Cabin and the Days of Poverty—The Last Sad Scenes.

The following interesting chapter is from the historical novel, just published at Stuttgart, Germany, by Dr. Theodore Canisius, entitled "Abraham Lincoln," and translated for the National Republican by Miss Eda Canisius, daughter of the author Dr. Canisius was an intimate friend of President Lincoln, and has come into possession of many interesting facts relating to the Lincoln family which would tend to make him a faithful biographer:

Unfortunately, Abe was not allowed to follow his inclination. The summer season again called him from his studies. Not only was there work in abundance in the woods and fields, but the state of his mother's health became more and more hopeless, so that he was again compelled to perform the hardest work of the household, which his sister could not accomplish alone.

The noble-hearted Mrs. Lincoln had become the shadow of her former self. Pale and emaciated, she glided about the house, and when she attempted now and then to perform with weak and trembling hands some little task she felt as though the exertion had exhausted all her energies. She seemed like a moving corpse, and only her strong will seemed to shield her body from dissolution. She would not yet depart from her loving ones, and—she lived. But how miserable that life during the whole of that summer! What a torture it had become to her! How many sleepless, feverish nights succeeded each other!

At last she could no longer even move about the hut to direct and superintend the household affairs.

For days she lay prostrate on her bed, with closed eyes, only now and then lisping feebly a few words, yet whatever she uttered in such sad moments was filled with tender care for her family. Even in the occasional feverish wandering of her mind her thoughts lingered on that which in her laborious existence had formed the very essence of her life, and disclosed the once untiring activity of a worthy, excellent and industrious housewife. On warm, sunny days Father Thomas would carry the weak and now feather-light sufferer into the shade of a tree in front of the little house, where Abe and his sister prepared with loving hands a couch of pillows and bedding. There mother Nancy often sat for hours together, the chills creeping through her frame even in the glowing sun-heat. Even then she looked with a faint smile toward her husband, who worked in the adjoining field, and who cast at intervals a careworn and anxious look toward his suffering wife; or her eyes followed the flight of birds that seemed to ascend to a higher world, to that far and unknown land toward which her soul was striving, for mother Nancy was about to close her earthly existence, although she struggled against her approaching dissolution.

How beautifully, in such moments the sun light transfigured the mild countenance of the parent and dying woman! How distinctly was it then revealed that a pure, God-fearing soul was departing this life! The quiet and pious expression of her face was truly spiritual, the beautiful, eloquent eyes were clearer than ever, and over her entire figure was poured that holiness with which the nature of a just person in the last hours of life, like a presentiment of eternal happiness, is endowed. And when Sarah, who so early had to take the housewife's place, left the hut and her work now and then to attend to her mother's wants—when Abe, awkward and slovenly as he was, crept with sorrowful face toward the sufferer's side, and looked with his large, intelligent eyes tearfully upon the invalid, often plucking shyly but tenderly at the pillows upon which she rested, or, overcome with grief, bent over her powerless and emaciated hands, mingling the scalding tears with his burning kisses—even then she had a smile for them, and no worldly anxiety was visible in her pale, sweet face; for as Heaven shed its glorious light over her features faith and hope filled her heart and robbed the thought of death of its horrors.

A lovely autumn day was drawing to an end. The sun had just disappeared behind the tops of the forest trees; the ether, with its light, motionless clouds, glowed in rosy hues and shed a soft, golden light over foliage and field and over the cabin of the Lincolns. It was yet daylight, and the little family formed a quiet and sad group before the house. Legrand, who during the first stage of Nancy's illness had repeatedly called at the house of our settlers, now wandered again among the Indians of the Far West. No one was present but the father, the suffering mother, and her two children. It was a Sunday evening, too. Abe had already, on many a Sabbath, undertaken his mother's holy office of reading the Scriptures to the pious and godly family. Now again, he sat upon a log near Mother Nancy, the old family Bible upon his knees, reading the Gospel in a soft but clear voice. His little sister sat beside the roughly-improvised couch of the mother, looking dreamily into her pale face and sunken eyes, while one of the thin hands of the patient woman rested upon the daughter's curly head. Father Thomas leaned against the tall sycamore, whose mighty branches shadowed the log-cabin and the sorrowing little group. His broad chest, across which his arms were folded, heaved and betrayed the feelings of the husband. He gazed motionless into his wife's almost transfigured countenance, over which at that moment the evening cast a roseate hue. At times his lips moved convulsively, as if unable to repress the anguish that cramped his heart. His tearful eyes expressed the terrible grief and awful solicitude of the plain but deeply-feeling pioneer. Mother Nancy's earthly moments were numbered. This Thomas could not disguise from himself. He saw it by the momentary, light, scarcely perceptible convulsions of her emaciated body; by the change that had taken place during the last hour of her beautified, gentle face; by the eyes that became more and more glazed, and only now and then lit up with an expression of love and anxiety for her dear ones.

"Stop reading, Abe," he murmured, trembling with apprehension; "it worries your mother."

"No," breathed Mrs. Lincoln, in broken sentences: "It seems as though angels—were singing psalms—as though the entire glory—of the other world were disclosed to me—yes, thus—thus I always wished to die—the blue heavens above me, you at my side—and God's word on my lips. Your hand, Thomas."

The husband bent over his wife and took her right hand, which she was unable to lift.

Abe had been silent. He now looked into his mother's face, hastily closed the Bible, and sprang up from the log.

"Gracious God! my mother is dying!" he stammered, and reeled pale and trembling, to her side, while Sarah uttered a cry, and, falling on her knees, buried her face, over which the tears were streaming in the lap of the dying woman. But Abe embraced his mother and held her in his arms, as though, poor boy, he could in that way stay the soul of the so dearly-loved mother.

"Don't cry," she whispered: "is not death a relief to me? I am prepared—I feel that I shall remain with you even when I am gone. I shall pray for you in Heaven—and shall see you all again. Be virtuous Sarah. Remain honest and true, my Abe—honor and love your father—he will bring you up as a Christian—I can die contentedly—and you—Thomas—"

"My Nancy—my wife!" stammered the strong man, now thoroughly overcome.

"I have been faithful to you," she continued, in a feebler tone, "and you have done your duty. Thanks for all your kindness to me! And now—God be with—you all"—

The noble woman endeavored to utter a few words more of love, but they were lost in an unintelligible murmur. One more glance she cast on all around her, and then her beautiful eyes, formerly so radiant with love became dim, the lips trembled for the last time. Death had come to her like sweet sleep; serene and holy transfiguration lay over her quiet features; a smile hovered around the lips. Life had fled; but Nancy Lincoln resembled a softly sleeping one over whom the last faint rays of the sun shed their mild, rosy hue. The children knelt weeping at the feet of the lifeless body. Thomas Lincoln still retained the now cold hand within his own.

"Let us pray, children," he muttered in deepest agony, "that God may not forsake us in the hour of our greatest trial and need—you have no mother now!"

The Peril of an Aeronaut.

It was about four o'clock when I started. I wanted to get away as soon as I could on account of the rain, so I started with the balloon about two-thirds full and therefore could take no ballast Before I got over the lake and while inside the city I threw out a heavy winter cloak, after which I rose higher, but still continued to go northward. When over the pier I threw out a coil of anchor rope weighing three pounds, hoping that I would rise still higher and get away from the lake. After throwing out the rope I passed from the rain storm into a snow storm. I was then about two miles up and the snow fell so thick and fast that I could not see beneath me. This lasted but a few minutes. The snow melted on the balloon and the cordage soaked full of water, making the balloon heavy, and it settled. I put out the red flag for help, fastened on my life-preserver, opened the valve and resigned myself to fate. I saw the steam tug following me, and I was so far away from it that it looked like a little speck upon the water. I was several miles from shore, and so far up the lake that I could hardly distinguish the city. In a few minutes I struck the water. The balloon, from which very little gas had escaped, turned partially over on its side, the basket was completely on its side, and my weight kept it under water. When I struck I plunged in nearly to my shoulders; the sudden chill nearly strangled me. I knew my only hope was in keeping in the basket.

At this time the basket was on its side; I was on my knees in the basket, with both hands over my head, hanging on to the ring from which the basket is suspended. The balloon dragged through the water at a fearful rate, answering for a sail. After dragging through the water in this manner for about half an hour I looked back over my shoulder and saw the steam from the tug like a faint speck in the distance. After dragging about an hour longer I heard their whistle, and indeed it was a joyful sound In a few minutes they came alongside. I shouted to them to see that the gas in the balloon did not catch on fire. They then seized hold of the cordage and lifted the balloon on deck. I was so chilled that I could hardly speak. They slit the balloon from the top to the bottom and it immediately collapsed and fell a shapeless mass on the deck. The captain and some ladies assisted me to the cabin and the ladies took good care of me and dried my clothes. The captain told me that he saw the balloon descend and that he could see the top of it on the water all the while. He said that I had floated about an hour and a half when he picked me up, and I was then seventeen miles from Oswego and seven miles from shore.

Young Love's Dream of Housekeeping.

They are young married people and have just gone to housekeeping, and the neighbors who assemble at their front windows to witness the harrowing sight of their parting for the day declare that the following is a verbatim account of their conversation:

"Good-by Charley; now be careful the street cars don't run off the track with you, and—kiss me, Charley—there was something I wanted to tell you—let me see, Was it hairpins? No, I got them—what could it have been?"

"I'm due at the office, pet," says Charley, bracing up and looking very handsome and manly; "was it something to eat?"

"Why of course it was; there isn't a bite of mashed potatoes in the house; nor a mouthful of bread and butter. We want half a yard of beefsteak—see and have it cut bias, so it will be tender—and a loaf of sweetbread, Charley, and a strawberry shortcake, dear, and anything else you think of, dear."

"But, my little wife," said Charley, looking very wise, "those things must all be made before we can eat them."

"Must they? Oh, dear! and I never learned to do fancy work. I never crocheted a biscuit fit to eat, and I couldn't paint a tomato to save my life. Oh, Charley, go to the ready made stores, do, there's a darling."

He did; and they had a picturesque meal of lobster and strawberries; with baker's rusk and lemonade, but Charlie has written to his mother to come at once and make them a long visit; they are so delightfully situated they can make it pleasant for her now, he says.

THE hundreds of families left homeless and destitute by the terrible Iowa tornado, and its many maimed and suffering victims, appeal strongly to the sympathies of the nation. This mute appeal should not be made in vain. Funds for distribution among these sufferers can be sent to Walter R. All Sorts.

Disapprobation: "Strawberry shortcake?" remarked Fogg, inquiringly, as he gazed at the meagre array of fruit between the thick crusts; "yes, I should say so—a good many strawberries short."

A Florida alligator which was killed the other day had an empty two-quart jug in its stomach. Fishermen in Florida carry a larger measure of "bait" in their hip pockets than do the anglers hereabout.

It is easy enough to destroy; and there are always destroyers enough. It requires skill and labor to erect a building; any idle tramp can burn it down. God alone can form and paint a flower; any foolish child can pull it all to pieces.

Ignorance of English: It is reported that English detectives have proved useless in Ireland, on account of their accent. We should think so. It rather gives a fellow away, bajove, when he walks into a Land League meeting in a damp cave and asks: "Beg pard'n y' know, but 'ave ye seen such a thing as a suspect about 'ere 'y know?"

With Grant: "I was with Grant," said the bareheaded stranger at Long Branch." "Ah, interrupted a kind man, "you are a veteran of the late war and need money to buy a loaf of bread." "No; no," continued the stranger. "I was with Grant. He was pulled out of the wrecked car first and, confound him, he walked off with my hat."

Art in the West: Art, as it finds expression in the columns of Western newspapers, is sometimes confusing. "Mother," asked a pupil of an Iowa public school, picking up a country journal and pointing to an engraving that covered the greater part of the front page, "is that a map of the moon?" "No, my child," she responded. "That is a picture of Guiteau's execution."

"How is the soil in Kansas?" asked one of a group, as the traveler paused. "Richest in the world, sir," was the reply. "I know a New York State man who went to Kansas seven years ago with only $15 in cash, and he is now worth $20,000." "Whew! What did he raise principally?" "I believe it was a check, sir—they couldn't exactly prove it on him. Think of a soil that will raise a bank check for $199 to $19,000, and in a backward season at that!"

A jack-knife codicil: A farmer's will was presented for probate (it was in old days) to an Archdeacon during his visitation. He found a name scratched out. The widow stepped forward and explained: "I tells you how he be, sir. When we comes to lock into the will we sees £50 left to John Wheeler. 'What's he got to do with master's money?' says I. So I gets a knife and us scratches him out, and that's just how he be, sir."

In polite phrase: A gentleman admires a charming woman over whose head the swarms of seventeen-year locusts have passed at least thrice. "But, I say," says one of his friends, "she's very charming, I know; still, you must admit that she is wrinkled." "Wrinkled!" echoes the chivalrous lover. "No, sir! There may be the indellible impression of a smile upon her face here and there, but that is all!"

Warning to Huggers.

There is a "case" on the practice-book of a well-known physician of West Oakland which ought to constitute a warning, and is, besides, an interesting surgical example of "the discohesive yielding of the flexions in old age"—as the doctor has it. Some months ago a young man arrived in Oakland from Montana. He proceeded at once the to home of his parents. The door was opened by the young man's grandmother, then nearly seventy years of age, and for whom he entertained a most commendable affection. The young man was a great favorite with the old lady; when he was a mere child she had made much of him, had sympathized in his boyish troubles, and had furnished him the sinews of war for many a youthful frolic. He had been a good and grateful grand son, and naturally, as they had been parted for several years, the greeting was an effusive one. But the old lady failed to realize that her favorite was no longer a budding stripling. The full-grown, bearded man before her, with brawn on his shapely limbs and toil-toughened muscles on his sinewy arms, was 30 pounds heavier and more than a little stronger than the boy whom she had kissed and sent to bed for the last time eight years before. On his part the young man did not realize that "gran'ma" was no longer the vigorous lady whom he had played with rompingly as a merry school boy in their far-off Eastern home. To his glad, grateful, grand, filial breast he caught her aged form and hugged her tight with the warm impulsiveness of impetuous youth. Had she been the usual sweetheart, there might have been no worse result than a fractured section of the whalebone stays, or a momentary cessation of not too necessary inspiration. As it was, the old lady said, simply, "Oh, my!" and sank back upon his shoulder in a dead faint. When she recovered from that she complained of a grievous pain in her side. A physician was sent for and his examination showed that three ribs had been dislocated by the "grand filial hug," and that the situation was a critical one, owing to the old lady's extreme age and to the fact that she was rather portly, and bandaging would, therefore, be deprived of much of its effectiveness. The old lady has been under medical treatment ever since, and is not at present suffering much pain. Her disconsolate and unreasonably self-reproaching grandson is her most devoted attendant.

A Missing Prince.

Quite a flutter has been caused in the circles of high society by the postponement of the wedding of Miss Allie Bouvier with the Prince Vallerie. The lady is well known and comes from an old Philadelphia family. Her sister is the wife of Banker Fred Drexel. As the story goes, while Miss Bouvier was traveling abroad a short time since, she met the Prince, who was engaging in his manners, and is said to be of the Italian branch of the Legitmists, his mother being a Bourben. The Prince and Miss Bouvier met each other frequently, and finally it was decided they should get married. Then the trouble began. The Prince did not desire to get married in France, because of the troubles with the law, but was willing to come to America for the wedding, so it was decided that the ceremony should take place in this city. The fact that the wedding was to occur in this city caused considerable talk in society circles, and the young lady was congratulated upon all hands for her good fortune in having captured a real live prince. The most elaborate preparations were made for the event and the invitations were prepared. The Prince promised when he left his inamorata in Paris to follow her to the United States as soon as he settled up some small business matters. As the day for his arrival approached there was considerable of a sensation in high society because of the anxiety of the young ladies to catch a glimpse of the Prince. A relative went to New York, but the Prince failed to arrive on the steamer. Letters and telegrams failed to reach him, and nothing has been learned of the whereabouts of the Bourbon since. The wedding has been consequently postponed until the Prince is found, and Mr. Dickson, a relative of the young lady, has been despatched to Paris to clear up the mystery and, if possible, find the Prince. The family and friends of the lady believe that some accident has happened to the fiance, and until apprised otherwise they will be loath to believe anything else.—Phil'a Record.

Preference: "I've got such an appetite," exclaimed Mrs. Brown at the end of her first week at the shore. "I feel as though I could eat all before me." "Yes, so I perceive," replied the landlady, gloomily. The laudlady had reason to be sad. Here was Mrs. Brown fairly eating her out of house and home, and growing leaner every day. As the landlady confidentially remarked to the cook that evening: "What is the use of feeding her the way I've been feeding her this whole week, and have her go away to bring discredit on my establishment? There's that Miss Squibbins, now, who doesn't eat enough to keep a robin alive, and she's as fat as butter. She's a boarder as is a boarder, and one that you can take some pride in."

Disease is an effect, not a cause. Its origin is within; its manifestations are without. Hence, to cure the disease the Cause must be removed, and in no other way can a cure be effected. WARNER'S SAFE KIDNEY AND LIVER CURE is established on just principles. It realizes that

The Horrors of War.

OFF ALEXANDRIA, July 13.—8.40 a. m.—Alexandria has been evacuated and is in flames.

HORRIBLE ATROCITIES PERPETRATED.

OFF ALEXANDRIA, July 13—9.25 a. m.—The entire garrison withdrew under the flag of truce, leaving the Bedouins to fire and pillage the town. The Egyptian army is greatly demoralized, and is in full retreat toward the interior. The European portion of the town, including the exchange and telegraph office, is utterly destroyed The city was set on fire by released convicts, who committed horrible atrocities. The telegraph ship Chiltern is crowded with survivors, who fought their way to the beach, whence the boats of the fleet removed them. They report having passed a dreadful night, defending themselves desperately against the mob. At the Ottoman bank and adjoining buildings one hundred Europeans and other Christians were massacred. This morning fully one-half the town is burning, and the Bedouins are looting—plundering—by thousands. There is no likelihood of a renewal of the bombardment today, as the weather is very rough and any further action must be ashore. There will be a landing in force to investigate the condition of affairs, and if possible render aid. In consequence of the Chiltern's change of position, there will probably be three or four hours' suspension of telegraphing. The Europeans who fought their way down to the beach number one hundred. They report that all the other Europeans and Christians, numbering some hundreds, were massacred. The whereabouts of the Khedive is unknown.

LONDON, July 13.—The Times this morning says it is understood that in the event of hostilities in Egypt the Duke of Connaught will volunteer his services. It is probable that if a force is sent out he will be given the command of one of the four infantry brigades.

Colonel McMichael.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Colonel William McMichael, Independent candidate for congressman-at-large, in his letter to Chairman Cooper this afternoon says he declines the proposition of the Republican state committee because they involve the abandonment of the cause of the Independent Republicans. If a new convention representing all Republicans had nominated a new ticket worthy of popular support and not containing the name of any candidate on either of the present tickets the necessity for a separate Independent Republican movement would not exist, but the propositions, he declares, practically propose to renominate General Beaver and reaffim the abuses which the Independents oppose. The Independent convention, he says, declared boldly against bossism and the spoils system, and we shall go on with this fight, asking the support of all who believe in the principles of the Independent Republican convention of May 24.

Shot at a Detective.

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—John Cannon Davis, a notorious character, pleaded guilty before Judge Elcock this morning to assault and battery upon Detective Hulfish, with intent to kill. On the 10th of last May Detectives Hulfish and Gray arrested Davis at the Pennsylvania railway station upon the arrival of a train from Harrisburg, and while they were on their way to this city with the prisoner, the latter shot Detective Hulfish and was himself wounded by a ball from Detective Gray's revolver. Davis has been in prison ever since, and is still suffering from his wounds. Sentence was deferred.

Irish Americans.

DUBLIN, July 13.—Two brothers named Flaherty, who recently returned from America, have been arrested in the northern part of county Kerry, on suspicion of complicity in the Phœnix park murders. They were remanded for a week.

The Egyptian War.

LONDON, July 14.—The London Times of this morning says: By this last outrage Arabi Pasha has put himself outside of the pale of humanity. He must be followed and his army dispersed It is satisfactory to know that the British preparations are complete and that we are ready to carry out the will of Europe if no other nation be found to do the work. Should the Porte still hold back, Lord Dufferin will state in the conference that England is prepared to undertake the task, but will welcome the co-operation of any other government.

A dispatch to the News from Alexandria says the number of persons massacred by the mob is estimated at 2,000.

Admiral Seymour telegraphs: I have occupied the Ras-el-Tin palace with marines and spiked the guns in six batteries opposite. The city is still burning, but I am clearing the streets. The khedive is safe in the palace, which is garrisoned by 700 marines.

LONDON, July 14.—A dispatch from Alexandria to Reuter's telegram company, dated 4 p. m., says the town is totally ruined. The houses from the great square to the custom houses have been burned. In the square itself and other wealthy European quarters there is hardly a building not ruined or still burning. The court house of the internaticnal tribunal has so far escaped. The Anglo-Egyptian bank is also preserved. The streets are strewn with empty clock and jewel cases and similar debris, but very few dead bodies have been found. Two-thirds of the troops deserted during the bombardment.

After the khedive's palace had been surrounded a party of soldiers entered the apartment and declared that they had orders to kill him and burn the palace. After long parleying their loyality was made by promises of money. They then escorted the khedive to the British at Res-el-Tin. His guard was not allowed to enter the palace there with him. All the ministers, except Arabi Pasha, presented themselves at the Res el-Tin palace. At 5 o'clock this evening a detachment of marines marched through the town. Some of the plunderers caught in the act were summarily shot.

ALEXANDRIA, July 15.—The conflagration was considerably abated at daybreak to-day, and by noon was virtually over. With the landing of foreign troops yesterday the mob ceased pillaging, except in remote districts, and to-day Admiral Seymour is establishing a police force for the further protection of the city. These measures, with the presence of the neutral troops, is rapidly restoring confidence, the cafes are throwing open their doors, and Arabs are moving about the streets saluting obsequiously every European they meet. The American marines were the first neutral troops to land and proffer their services in aiding the British to restore order. The German troops followed, both detachments landing without any political instructions from their governments. All the vessels in the harbor, except those of Austria and Greece, landed troops.

Captain Fisher, of the Inflexible has taken command of the land forces, and all the Gattling and field guns are being sent to him from the fleet. The American marines occupy the Great square, with their headquarters in the St. Mark's buildings, which were only partially destroyed.

According to the accounts of persons who remained in the city, bands of murderers, during and after the bombardment, forced their way into almost every house. The plundering and burning began on the 12th. Scarcely any European dwelling was spared. It appears that large stores of petroleum were sent to Alexandria the week before the bombardment, specially to set fire to the town. The incendiaries state that they were given instructions to set fire to the houses. The offices of the Ottoman bank and the Credit Lyonnaise escaped the general destruction of the banks. The English consulate and the great grain and cotten stores escaped the destruction. Thirteen hundred Christians escaped by taking refuge in the Coptic church during the massacre. The fires in the town were undoubtedly directly instigated by the principal supporters of Arabi Pacha, if not by himself. After the looting commenced the soldiers attacked the original plunderers and robbed them of their prey.

The foreign naval officers are nearly unanimous in thinking that the fleet fired with greater precision than they had believed possible. The Americans were particularly enthusiastic. They took careful observations of each shot, and state that the result established the fact that in a quiet sea a large ship is at no disadvantage against a fort, and a small ship is at much less than was supposed. The German officers expressed a similar opinion, while the Austrians were much less complimentary. The bombarding of Tuesday almost exterminated the Egyptian corps of artillerymen, which was the best branch of the army.

ALEXANDRIA, July 15.—The khedive has dismissed Arabi Pasha from the ministry of war. The fire continues. The aspect of the town is indescribable. It reminds one of Pompeii. Whole families of Europeans have disappeared. It is believed they were thrown into the flames.

ALEXANDRIA, July 17—9:45 a. m.—Admiral Seymour has issued a manifesto, announcing that he has undertaken, with the consent of the Egyptian government, the restoration of order. Nobody is allowed to leave the town after sunset.

LONDON, July 17.—The Alexandria correspondent of the Times relates that during the massacre the soldiers set fire to the house of a timber merchant. A maid servant escaped to the garden, where she remained surrounded by fire, the soldiers laughing at her agony and firing at her, but purposely avoiding the infliction of fatal injury, preferring to see her burn to death. Finally she rushed through the flames, and though wounded by bayonet thrusts, she succeeded in securing refuge in the ruins, where she was discovered by the marines and handed over to the Americans.

LONDON, July 17.—The Times this morning says the offer of rations which Admiral Seymour has made to such Egyptian soldiers as choose to return to allegiance to the Khedive will be a considerable inducement to their loyalty, and will increase the staff available for pressing sanitary operations.

LONDON, July 17.—The Times' Paris correspondent reports that a cabinet council has resolved to accept the invitation to protect the Suez canal jointly with England.

The Daily News' dispatch from Marseilles says: "Six French transports have been ordered to get ready to embark troops."

LONDON, July 17.—A dispatch from Constantinople to Reuter's telegram company states that the occupation of Egypt in case of Turkish intervention is to be limited to six months, as previously reported. The object of occupation will probably be defined as follows: The termination of anarchy, the re-establishment of the status quo, the reorganization of the army and the development of popular liberties. It is proposed that the Khedive shall supervise the work of the occupying troops.

ALEXANDRIA, July 18—1:25 a. m.—Fresh fires occurred last night. The troops from the ship Tarma are disembarking, and will raise the British forces to 6,000.

Death from Sun Stroke.

NEWVILLE, July 15.—On Friday afternoon word was received at this place that David Quigley, residing near Quigley's bridge, had died very suddenly. As near as can be ascertained he returned from the harvest field and partook of a 10 o'clock lunch, and then went to the barn and ran the wagon out. He then went back to the barn where he was found dead shortly after by some of the family. A post mortem examination was held last evening by Drs. Lebernight and Kremer of Newburg, and Drs. Stewart and Claudy of this place, whose yerdict was that death resulted from sun stroke.

The Champions.

NEW YORK, July 17.—John S. Sullivan and "Tug" Wilson, the English champion, fought in Madison Square garden to-night. During the course of the fight Wilson was knocked down twenty-seven times, but succeeded in standing out for the entire four rounds, winning the money. Time of fight, including allowance between rounds, 15 minutes.

The Scotio Investigation.

WHEELING, W. Va., July 13.—In the Scioto investigation to-day William McCormick, of Moundsville, a saloon keeper, swore that Pilot Keller, of the Scotio, was so drunk in his place that the bar-keeper refused him liquor and advised him to go to bed and sleep it off. The bar-keeper contradicted McCormick's evidence in every particular.

The Far West.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—Juan B. Alvardo, governor of California from 1836 to 1843, died at San Pablo yesterday, aged seventy-three.

A Portland dispatch says: Six business blocks in Dayton, W.T., were burned last night, including every store, hotel and bank. The loss is estimated at three hundred thousand dollars. Details are delayed, owing to the burning of the telegraph office.

A Cyclone's Work.

TEYARKANA, Ark., July 13.—Eight corpses have been recovered from the buildings wrecked by the cyclone Colonel Mayfield, Fred. Smith, John May and other names not learned. More are wounded seriously and will probably die. Great crowds of excited people are around. There are only seven or eight more bodies in the ruins.

Murderer Arrested.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 17.—Henry Meyers, who murdered William Huffnagle near Berwick last week, came to this city to-day. He fell into the hands of a detective and was taken to the county prison. He says he would have surrendered himself at Berwick had not the excitement been so intense.

Letter to Employes.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The secretary of war has issued a circular letter to the employes in the war department calling for full information regarding their positions, the date of their appointment, from what state, etc., and also inquiring the number of relatives, if any, otherwise employed in the government service.

Two Men Killed.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., July 13.—George Harper, a prominent contractor, and William Robinson, a miner, were instantly killed to-day by a fall of rock, in a new slope which they were sinking at Excelsior for the Excelsior coal company. George Narrens was slightly injured.

A Chinaman's Wrath.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Sue Sing, a Chinaman, was arraigned in court today, charged with throwing a kettle of boiling water over a number of children, and seriously scalding Carrie Wittenburg, aged five years, of No. 4 First avenue. From the statement made by the policeman it appears that about eight o'clock, while a number of small children were playing in front of the Chinaman's laundry, they were suddenly chased away by Sue Sing. A few minutes later the children returned and began teasing the Chinaman and throwing small stones into his laundry. Becoming terribly excited, Sue Sing ran to the back of his place, picked up a kettle of boiling water and threw the contents among the children. All escaped with but little injury except Carrie Wittenburg, who was terribly scalded over the head and face, and is now lying in a critical condition at her home. The child's father appeared in court this morning and handed to Justice Kilbreth a physician's certificate stating that the child was in a very dangerous condition and unable to leave her bed. Justice Kilbreth committed the prisoner without bail to await the result of the child's injuries.

The Freight Handlers.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The situation among the freight handlers remains without change, except that many of the new hands are being drawn away. At the pier of the Erie railroad there was no work at all done. The force of Italians numbering more than 200 men did not put an appearance this morning, and upon investigation it was discovered that the men had been persuaded by agents of Italian laborers organizations not to resume work. The superintendent in charge of the pier immediately sent down to the labor bureau, at Castle Garden to secure all unemployed men there, but was only able to obtain about twenty-five Italians.

Mrs. Scoville.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 13.—Mrs. Scoville was interviewed regarding the statement that the bouquet she sent Guiteau on his last day in jail was poisoned, and said sarcastically, "of course they found poison; it is just like them. Beside they had to manufacture some story to excuse their brutality in excluding me from Charles' cell." She then denied point blank having put arsenic on the bouquet; said she did not want Guiteau to escape the gallows by such means, and that he would not have taken the poison if he could. She expressed the intention of continuing the legal agitation over this matter until it is proven an insane man was hanged.

Explosion of Powder.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 12.—While William H. Chardwick, head chemist for the powder manufacturing firm of E. I. Dupont, Denmons and Co., was engaged in some chemical manipulations in their refinery today, a bottle of alcohol was accidentally ignited, setting fire to a small quantity of powder. An explosion followed, and Mr. Chadwick was burned so badly that he died this afternoon.

For Young Men.

During many years there has been an expressed desire on the part of the young men of this place for at least one of three things, or all of them if it is possible to secure so much. These are a bathing house, a boating house, well equipped with boats, or a gymnasium. There is a prospect that one of these may be secured soon. It is considered almost too late in the season for either the boat house or bathing house, although there is no reason why arrangements should not be made to secure both of them by next season. Consequently, the efforts of those who are now considering the subject will be devoted to fitting up a gymnasium in the proper style.

—The peace of Egypt is at an end. The guns of the English ironclads have opened their bombardment upon her venerable capital and it was not long before her forts were silenced. This land where once the Israelites were in bondage must now be in bondage to the greater powers of Europe, which Christian civilization has made strong and powerful. Thus will the law of retributive justice be exemplified. Before long, perhaps, Egyptian darkness will disappear, and when her people become wise enough to rule themselves they may be permitted to do so. But meanwhile, the citizens of Centre county will continue to purchase groceries at Sechler's store. It is an indication of high civilization to do so, because it will help each one of us to continue healthy, wealthy and wise. Sechler deals only in the best of groceries, without adulteration of any kind, and sells them as cheap as the cheapest. He deals only in groceries and meat, with both of which he is always well supplied. His establishment is on High street, in the Bush House block.

Orange Blossoms.

Mr. H. M. Hibler, formerly of Bellefonte, but at present a member of the clerical force of the First National Bank, of Bradford, McKean county, Pa., was married, June 28, '82, to Miss Nellie M. Owen, at the residence of her father, Jno. R. Owen, at Parker's Landing, Armstrong county, Pa.

The above announcement will prove highly gratifying to the many friends of "Moran" in this neighborhood when told that the lady is one in every way worthy the life-long companionship and devotion of one in every way calculated to make her happy. We congratulate the fortunate couple and trust they may live a long and happy life.—Democrat.

—Some men (Gen. Grant, for instance) derive much enjoyment from a cigar. This is always the case if the cigar is purchased of Harry Green.

—A copy of the "Life of Gen. James A. Beaver," by Frank Burr, has been received at this office. It is a work of literary merit and its typographic execution is very handsome. It contains 224 pages. After referring to the family from whence General Beaver sprang, tracing it back four or five generations, the major part of the work is devoted to a description of his military career, closing with a few chapters which allude to his private life and his connection with various public institutions. Our space forbids further reference to this excellent work, but we consider it one of which the next Governor of Pennsylvania may well be proud. It may be had of all booksellers, in cloth $1.00, in paper 25 cents, or by addressing the author, Frank A. Burr, care The Press, Philadelphia, Pa.

EMPLOYMENT FOR LADIES.—The Queen City Suspender Company, of Cincinnati, are now manufacturing and introducing their new Stocking Supporters for Ladies and Children, and their unequaled Skirt Suspenders for ladies. None should be without them; our leading physicians recommend them, and are loud in their praise. These goods are manufactured by ladies who have made the wants of ladies and children a study, and they ask us to refer them to some reliable and energetic lady to introduce them in this county, and we certainly think that an earnest solicitation in every household would meet with a ready response, and that a determined woman could make a handsome salary and have the exclusive agency for this county. We advise some lady who is in need of employment to send to the company her name and address, and mention this paper. Address Queen City Suspender Company, 179 Main st., Cincinnati, O. 27-5t

Pineapples.

The last pineapples of the season are now offered for sale in our market and to those who have feasted on them during the past few months the subjoined information about the delicious fruit, which we glean from an exchange, may be of interest:

The average life of the "scarlet" pine is three years; that of the sugar loaf is about five. The average weight of the fruit in the Bahamas is from three to three and a half pounds. A field is generally gone over three times during the season, affording three grades of fruit, called first, second and third cuttings. The scarlet variety ripens a month or two earlier than the sugar-loaf. Owing to the sharp serrated leaves of the plant, the gathering of the fruit is a tedious and difficult matter, the men, women and children engaged in the work being obliged to wear heavy canvas leggings and gloves with gauntlets to protect themselves against the sharp spines of the plant.

The pineapple plant furnishes but one regular crop during the year, although the local markets are seldom without a few pineapples on sale. About the middle of April the first cuttings are made of the scarlet pines, and the last is made about the 1st of July. The sugar-loaf pine is at maturity during July and August. The shipping season is one of signal activity in the colony, for when the fruit is ready for the knife it must be cut and hurried with all speed to market or it will be lost.

—Something happened in Elmira the other day which it is difficult to believe could occur in such a civilized, Christian community. A little four-year old daughter of a colored woman died without shelter or other protection than its grandmother's arms, in Jones' lane, that city. The colored friends and acquaintances of her mother in Elmira would not admit her beneath their roofs. So the little thing died and was laid out on a bench in the street. What a crying shame for a city with its handsome private residences, its scores of church spires, and its Thomas K. Beecher pouring forth homilies on Christian charity! —a man whose sister was the instrument, in her interesting story about "Uncle Tom," of convincing the Americans that the Negro is possessed of a soul as valuable as that of his white brother. We are at loss to account for such apparent cruelty and indifference except upon the assumption that the people of that city need something that Bellefonte has had for years, viz: a first-class grocery store where the very best of groceries can be procured at all times. This is found in the establishment of Sechler & Co., in the Bush House block. The stock of groceries kept by Sechler cannot be excelled in any of the large cities. His meat market is also a model of its kind, and we predict that no man, woman or child in this community will starve while Sechler remains here to supply their wants.

—At a recent meeting of the vestry of the Episcopal church of this place Rev. John Hewitt, the rector, tendered his resignation and it was, we regret to state, accepted. It will take effect in September. Ill health and a fear that he would not be fit to fulfill the duties expected of him are said to have prompted his resignation. He will probably go to a mission church in another part of this state which he was instrumental in founding several years ago. No greater calamity could possibly befall the Episcopal church in this place than the retirement of its learned and talented Rector from the position in which, within a few years, he has endeared himself to the hearts of the people. But an over-ruling Providence seems to require the separation to be made.

—People like to deal with an experienced business man, and Harry Teats, the grocer, has a large experience, of which he will give his customers the benefit.

—Vennor predicts some hard storms in this section of the country during the month. Following are his prognostications of the weather during the remainder of this month: "Between the 20th and 23d cooler and windy weather, with continual rains and cool evenings and nights. Between the 24th and 26th there is likely to occur a very hot term. After the 26th or 27th, sultry, warm and oppressive weather with thunder storms, up to the close of the month. There may be indications of a cooler change about the last day of the month—probably, altogether a muggy and reeking wet month, very different from 1881."

—If you would have a satisfactory smoke buy your cigars of Harry Green.

—The name "Holly Tree Inn" is one that indicates cheerfulness and awakens pleasant thoughts. The holly tree bears beautiful green leaves and is used to decorate the interior of churches at certain periods of the year. A "Holly Tree Inn" should, therefore, always represent a scene of exquisite comfort and neatness and be inviting to travelers.

Fruit.

It really begins to appear that fruit of all kinds will be scarce this year. Strawberries began the season, but were limited in quantity, and could be procured in this place only after a diligent search and then at very high prices. Cherries, usually abundant by the Fourth of July, are making their appearance slowly, but before we are aware that they are here, lo! the season will be passed and gone. Indeed, the better varieties of cherries are a total failure this year, only the sweet black and the very sour red varieties maturing. We have not heard whether raspberries, blackberries and whortleberries will be plentiful, but they seem to be very dilatory in ripening. We do not think the apple crop will be large, and the peach crop is not worth alluding to. Plums, as usual, are encountering too many insect enemies to weather the storm until maturity. Quince trees are well laden, but a couple of months must elapse before we can be sure regarding the supply of this delicious fruit. Altogether, the home prospect for fruit is not encouraging, and we hope the wonderful reports about the Delaware peach crop are not a snare for man's delusion given.

Information

For co-operating friends to whom I am always indebted for needed and most helpful assistance. Report for May and June: Eleven new Sunday schools organized and furnished; 26 other schools variously aided; 26 sermons and addresses; 84 Bibles and Testaments distributed; 96 family visits; over 100 miles necessarily on foot. In one section of 18 communities visited, the only regular Lord's day service is the Sunday school. By this agency, in the two months past, we have reached over 500 children, not to mention adults, who have no church or pastor or Christian parents to give them religious instruction. By the hands of the children in our Union schools we are constantly placing the choicest religious papers and leaves of Scripture within hundreds of families that would otherwise have none. With God's evident favor, "giving Him the glory," we "go forward." Hopefully ever,

—We desire to call the attention of our readers to the very ingenius arrangement recently invented for making coffee and for which Mr. J. W. Vanvalin, of Unionville, is sole agent for Centre county. It is called the "Precious" Vienna Coffee Engine, and from a practical trial of its merits we can testify that it is all it represents—unexcelled for making rich, strong, odorous coffee, a veritable "nectar of the gods." It is said that the steam which escapes while the coffee is in preparation contains a large part of the real essence of the coffee, and the engine confines this steam, thus preserving all the original qualities of the coffee in perfection. Those who wish to make such coffee as they never drank before should address J. W. Vanvalin, Fleming, Pa.

—The usefulness of the telephone, and its advantages, are being rapidly extended all over the State, and the day is probably not far distant when we shall have the opportunity of indulging in a social chat with the Philadelphian, the Pittsburger and the Erieite. Operator Malin was in communication Sunday with Lock Haven, Milton and Williamsport. These offices were all connected and the conversation was carried on with ease and clearness, a whisper being distinctly heard at this end of the connection. Verily, the electric talking machine is a big "inwenshun."

—Our readers will find it to their interest to patronize the grocery store of Harry Teats & Co.

Returning to Work.

The following special dispatch to this paper was received on Thursday afternoon too late for insertion:

VAIL, July 13, 2 p m.

The strike is breaking in the Clearfield region. Men will go to work on Monday, regardless of the order of the Knights of Labor. A majority of the Knights of Labor will go in also. McPadden, the labor agitator, gained nothing in the Clearfield region. It is believed that by Monday all mines will work full, as no advance will be paid. Peace and quiet prevail. B.

Nervous debility, the curse of the American people, immediately yields to the action of Brown's Iron Bitters.

—On Sunday we heard the following Scripture text read in one of the churches of this place:

"For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell or to hear some new thing."—Acts 17: 21.

It occurs to us that those "Athenians and strangers" would make first-class local reporters.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which sulphur, sugar of lead, and nitrate of silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. THE LATEST NEWS.

War Commenced.

ALEXANDRIA, July 11.—7 a. m.—The bombardment has commenced.

LONDON, July 11.—The Standard's correspondent on the Invincible telegraphs the following:

ALEXANDRIA, July 11.—9:10 a. m.—The attack on forts has now been kept up two hours. Smoke hangs over the town along the line of shore batteries and among the ships, and it is difficult to see what damage has been done. It is certain, however, that the enemy has suffered heavily. Ft. Marsa Elkanet has been blown up by the fire from other batteries. Forts are slackening their fire. The top of the tower of Fort Pharos has been carried away, and many guns have been dismounted on that and other forts. The flag of Geneva Red Cross is hoisted and flying over the city. The Dutch and Greek flags are hoisted over the respective consulates. At the beginning of the bombardment immense excitement was visible; crowds of people were seen wandering the way toward the palace. The streets are now deserted, people having fled or taken refuge in cellars. There are no signals of a surrender so far."

ALEXANDRIA, July 11.—6.50 p. m.—Action is finished for the day. Casualties on the English side, forty wounded. None killed. Shortly after noon all the exposed guns on the forts were dismounted, and only those in sheltered positions were able to return the British fire.

Admiral Seymour recommences the attack on the forts in Gubberrari and harbor ports in the morning. The small effect of the heavy guns on the earthworks caused some disappointment in the fleet. Invincible had four men wounded; Inflexible was hit five times.

LONDON, July 11.—An official telegram received from Alexandria to-night says the casualties on the British side are, five killed and twenty-seven wounded.

The Strike.

JERSEY CITY, July 11.—The general aspect of the strike here remains the same. The railroad companies are working a full force of men, and claim that they can handle all the freight sent to them. The strikers held another meeting to-day. Jeremiah Murphy, president of the Union, said he had received reliable information that there were now over 4,000 car loads of freight standing on the side tracks of the Erie road between Jersey City and Port Jervis. He further stated that on Saturday last the Pennsylvania road had put seventy-five men to work to load thirty cars of flour, but when the men quit work at 5:30 only eight cars had been loaded. It was then discovered that two barrels had been put in the wrong car by mistake and seven cars were unloaded in hunting for the missing barrels. Resolutions were adopted denouncing the hoodlums who assaulted the Russian Jews yesterday and denying that the strikers approved of such action.

Politicians in Conclave.

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—Senator Stewart, Levi Bird Duff and George Junkin, Independent Republican candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Supreme Judge, respectively, met here this evening, at the residence of Colonel McMichael, candidate for Congressman at Large. Chairman McKee, of the State committee and Charles Wolfe were also present. The purpose was to talk about the probable action of the Regular Republican State committee, which will meet to-morrow. It is understood that all the Independent candidates as well as Chairman McKee and Charles Wolfe would reject a proposition from the Stalwarts for a new convention unless the delegates should be elected under the rules adopted by the Independent convention of last May.

The Tariff Commission.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The tariff commission to-day issued a circular, inviting correspondence from all associations, corporations and individuals desiring to furnish information or testimony for its consideration. Correspondents are requested to mention specifically the subjects on which they desire to be heard or in relation to which they desire to offer testimony. Communications should be addressed to Hon. John S. Hayes, president of the commission, West End hotel, Long Branch. It is the intention of the commission to arrange the hearing of testimony with a view to saving time, and persons desiring to be heard will be notified of time and place at which the commission will hear the testimony which they may offer.

Chairman Chosen.

PHILDELPHIA, July 11.—Robert E. Pattison, Chancey M. Black and J. Simpson Africa, Democratic candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Secretary of Internal Affairs, respectively, and Mr. Hill, representing Silas M. Clark, candidate for Supreme Judge, met in the office of George M. Dallas this evening and unanimously chose W. U. Hensel, of the Lancaster Intelligencer, chairman of the Democratic State committee. Mr. Elliott, candidate for Congressman at Large, was not represented at the meeting, but it is reported that he favored Mr. Hensel.

The Republican Committee.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—The republican state committee met here this morning. Ninety-two of the ninety-nine members were present.

Chairman Cooper, upon the calling of the committee to order, explained that the call for the committee meeting was made under a resolution adopted at Harrisburg on June 21, which stipulated that the state committee should use all honorable means to the end that harmony might be restored to the party.

A proposition suggesting that both the stalwart and independent tickets be withdrawn was submitted on behalf of the Young Republican club, but it was suggested that before the committee discuss any proposition it would be well that the candidates on the regular ticket be present. A committee was then appointed to wait on these gentlemen and invite them to be present.

When the committee appointed to invite the presence of the candidates arrived with those gentlemen they presented a letter signed by all those occupying a place on the ticket, in which it was set forth that the candidates would gladly place themselves in the hands of the state committee; that they would submit their claims to any test deemed wise by that body, and would be willing to retire from the ticket if such a course was deemed necessary.

Ex-Judge Pettit, of Crawford, then submitted the following propositions, which were to be placed before the independents for consideration and acceptance or rejection: First, that both tickets be submitted to the popular vote of the republican party at the primaries; second, that the republican party at the primaries select a ticket by the popular vote, the primaries to be open for the candidature of any republican whatsoever, whether on either of the present tickets or not; third, that a new convention, under the rules adopted by the Continental hotel conference of stalwarts and independents, be held on the 4th Wednesday in August, the rules to govern said convention to be prepared by ex-Chief Justice Agnew, Hampton L. Carson and Francis B. Reeves; Fourth, that the new convention be held under rules adopted by the republican convention of the 10th of May last, said convention not to be later than the fourth Wednesday in August.

It was decided that the chairman of the state convention be empowered to present these four propositions to the independents, any one of which will be acceptable to the regulars. The committee appointed a finance committee to carry on the campaign.

The Egyptian War.

OFF ALEXANDRIA, July 12.—1.30 p. m. A flag of truce is shown from the town, and a vessel steaming toward the fleet is also displaying a flag of truce.

LONDON, July 12—The Times' correspondent, writing about yesterday's bombardment, says: The gunboats played an active part in the operations, creeping close up to the forts and silencing several guns. The Inflexible made splendid practice, firing at a range varying from two thousand to three thousand yards. The Temeraire was ashore for some time, but was floated at 8 o'clock in the morning. The gunboat Condor ran within twelve hundred yards of the Marabout fort, a single shot from which would have sunk her, and before the signal was given to cease firing she had silenced three great guns on the fort, Admiral Seymour signaling "Well done, Condor." The Superb has two holes in her sides, the deadly effect of the electric broadsides from the ships which attacked the Pharos and Ras-El-tin forts. The Inflexible, being furthest westward, was able to shell the Mex's forts with one turret and the Ras-El-tin forts with the other. After all of the enemy's guns had been silenced the men-of-war continued shelling the fortifications and used shrapnel, probably at retreating soldiers.

LONDON, July 12.—A dispatch from Alexandria sent at 9 25 to-night says it is supposed that the Egyptian troops have evacuated the town, as the fires to-night are assuming large proportions. The town is reported to be almost empty and it is believed it has been left to low Arabs possibly to Beduoins to plunder. The darkness of the night makes the conflagration appear very vivid. It is supposed the town is being reduced to ashes wilfully. At sunset the white flag was still flying.

Result of a Duel.

MATAMORAS, Mexico., July 11.—Captain Alvers and Major Cordovo officers of the second regiment fought a duel at San Luis Patosi yesterday. The former was killed on the spot, and the latter died soon after he was removed from the field.

Part of the second corps of gendarmes fought banditti under Manuel Gomez near Sa Media Suna in Jolisco yesterday. Manuel and Jose Gomez leaders and seven other banditti were killed and the rest of the band scattered.

Result of a Gas Explosion.

PARIS, July 12.—An explosion of gas occurred to-day in the Rue Louis Phillippe, the result of a fire, nobody having thought at the outbreak of the fire to cut off the gas. Twelve houses were destroyed, twenty persons were killed and forty wounded. One hundred are rendered homeless.

Bills of Ejectment.

CUMBERLAND, Md., July 12.—The Maryland coal company to-day filed bills of ejectment, returnable July 18, against the strikers who are occupants of the company's dwellings. The tenants have retained counsel to contest the issue.

TESTED AND FOUND WORTHY.
In order to bring more fully before the notice of the people the value of a true and tried remedy, we give the following reliable testimonial from one of the many who have been cured, and whose reputation for veracity cannot be questioned.
WOODBURY, N. J., March 20, 1882.
SWEDISH BITTERS CO.:
GENTLEMEN,—I have suffered with dyspepsia and its horrible effects for many years. Have spent hundreds of dollars with physicians and in patent medicines, with no avail. I have been unable to eat meats of any kind, and could not retain water on my stomach, and was unable to sleep at night. I was induced to procure and try a bottle of your Swedish Bitters, and can conscientiously say that its use was followed by beneficial results. I can now sit down and enjoy a hearty meal of meats and vegetables of any kind and have gained sixteen pounds in three weeks and can cordially recommend it to others.
Yours respectfully,
AUGUSTUS PREHL,
Prop'r of Woodbury City Coach Line, Prehl's Livery and Accommodation Stables.

—The ladies' fashionable hat
Is numerous in town:
From its rear long, flowing streamers
Hang gracefully down.
A gorgeous feather on one corner
Of yellew, pink or white,
Gives it quite a regal look
And is a pleasant sight.
Its broad brim softly covers
A very pretty face,
With a mouth just made to eat ice cream,
Which it does with charming grace.

With sundry stones and sticks the monster (for such it proved to be) was dispatched. It had fourteeen rattles, showing it to be seventeen years old, and was about four feet long.

All who go will find Williamsport a most delightful city in which to spend a few days and the Park Hotel, which offers reduced rates for the occasion, equal in every respect to the best hotels in the large cities.

Notes About Town.

The pavements on Spring street are not more easy or safe to walk on now than they were two years ago, and then they were superlatively awful.

Spring street may be termed the religious thoroughfare, as the two most commodious churches are located on it, a third equally elegant is now in process of erection, and the two largest ministers in town reside on it.

Workmen are employed in erecting a fence around the public school property and seem to be making an all-summer's job of it. A novel foundation for the new fence is a combination of old iron, crockery ware and loose stone. Perhaps it's what the Watchman and Democrat would term æsthetic.

There are several valuable building lots on either side of Linn street which we would like to own, notably the one opposite the public school grounds on the corner of Linn and Spring.

Curtin street is high and ought to be healthy.

The new residence of Mrs. Natt, between those of Mr. H. B. Pontius and General James A. Beaver, is almost completed, but there is still some work to be done to the fence, judging by its unpainted condition and the amount of barbed wire which takes the place of pickets. It is dark enough for a public school blackboard, but is withal quite pretty in this deluded age of dark paint, dark paper, dark—everything.

General Beaver's conservatory contains very few flowers, but the handsome grounds around his residence are beautified with them. His residence stands the test of years very well and seems to improve on every separate inspection. There are some peas growing in his rear garden, the vines of which are quite Stalwart in proportions. They stand up straight and strong, despite the fierce winds which swept over them on Tuesday.

Mr. George Valentine's residence does not require dark paint to increase its stylish exterior. A little more shrubbery in the surrounding grounds would improve their appearance, but that will come with age.

The lawn around Mr. John Ardell's residence eclipses anything of the kind in town. Its velvety smoothness is perfect.

We never knew the grounds around Mrs. Harriet Lane's residence to look so beautiful as they do now. The wet season has a favorable effect on them. The shrubbery, in thickness and luxuriance, suits our taste exactly, while the green sward is of a deep rich hue.

Several handsome flowering vines are climbing the lattice in front of Dr. Dartt's residence. Behind them occupants of the porch are shielded from the full view of persons on the street.

The pavements in many places along Allegheny street are susceptible of some improvement.

The Society of Friends is a rich congregation. Why not erect a new church building, and thus honor God with their means as well as with their hearts?

Alluding to churches, why cannot all the denominations unite in erecting the Baptists a church building? They are poor and unable to do it, while it would be no more than an act of Christian charity on the part of the other churches. And it would be a deed of beautiful Christian liberality which would elicit the admiration of the outside world.

—Gregg Post, G. A. R., have been actively engaged of late in organizing posts of the order in the various surrounding towns. One evening of last week delegates from Gregg Post went to Unionville and successfully organized a post at that place, about twenty-five joining it at the first meeting. It will be known as Peters Post, No. 263. On Tuesday evening a similar delegation repaired to Howard, where they were again successful. The new Post—which will be known as Post Grove—started with a membership of twenty-two. It was named after two brothers who were killed in the service. The delegation from this place numbered fourteen, and aside from their success in organizing the Post, enjoyed the trip very heartily. Future expeditions for a similar purpose will soon be made to other towns in the county.

—The aggregate weight of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wheeland, of Loyalsock township, Lycoming county, with one son and three daughters, is 1,205 pounds. The Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin questions if there is another equally heavy family of six in the State. Perhaps Centre county can go one ahead. Please report.

—Brown, the fruit vender and grocer, had apples, peaches and cherries on Wednesday morning. He shows considerable enterprise.

Reunion at Rebersburg.

The Reunion of the surviving members of Company "A" 148th regiment, P. V., will be held at Rebersburg on the 25th of August, 1882, it being the 20th anniversary of their "mustering" into the service.

The members of the company will form at 9 a. m., on the spot in front of the Rebersburg Hotel where they were sworn into service twenty years before, and will be briefly addressed by Maj. R. H. Forster of Bellefonte. Thence the company, orphans of deceased soldiers of this company, and soldiers belonging to other organizations, will march in procession to Kreamer's woods, south of Rebersburg, where a historical sketch will be given of the service of company A during the late war, by Maj. R. H. Forster. Gen. J. A. Beaver and other distinguished speakers are expected to be present and deliver addresses, after which the soldiers will go into camp and prepare dinner for themselves in the most approved army style.

Knapsacks packed with eight days' rations, and other necessary appendages, pack mules to carry ammunition, provisions and utensils, and soldiers' complete outfit on a march, will be among the attractions of the day. A brass band will be present to enliven the occasion with music. Fire works at night.

A cordial invitation is extended to all soldiers and soldiers' orphans to be present, and a general invitation is given to citizens to make it an occasion for a basket picnic. Soldiers are requested to bring with them cooking utensils and provisions to prepare meals as they were accustomed to in the army.

Arrangements will be made to accommodate all members of company "A" and their families and orphans of deceased soldiers of this company, coming from a distance, by calling on the committee of arrangements, which is composed of the following gentlemen: Henry Meyer, J. A Miller, S. M. Spangler, Elias Stover, Jesse Long and Thomas E. Royer.

The Printers' Picnic.

The picnic of the Juniata Valley Printers' Association, which will be held in this place on the 1st of September, will be an event of considerable importance. Last year there were over 800 persons present at Bedford Springs, but the number will be smaller this year as the railroad companies do not care to transport so many persons and the attendants will be strictly limited to printers and editors. P. Gray Meek, of the Watchman, is President of the Association and Mr. Fred. Kurtz, of the Centre Hall Reporter, is a member of the executive committee. Arrangements have been made for entertainment at the several hotels and restaurants for all, at very reasonable rates. The excursionists will be taken care of at the Bush, Brockerhoff, Garman and Butts hotels, and if these places prove insufficient John Anderson will be prepared to give a fine dinner to the gentlemen at his restaurant. The Commissioners of Centre county have granted the use of the Court House yard to those persons who bring their lunch and wish a pleasant place in which to partake of it, although it is expected that most persons will go to the hotels.

Upon the arrival of the excursionists at this place they will at once proceed to the Court House, where an address of welcome will be delivered by Hon. C. T. Alexander, responded to by W. H. Swartz, Esq., of the Altoona Tribune. Gen. James A. Beaver and Hon. A. G. Curtin will also be present and address the meeting. After that the regular business meeting will be held and at its adjournment the excursionists may "distribute" themselves to the several hotels to which they are individually ticketed. The McVeytown Cornet Band and Orchestra will be present to furnish the music. A grand hop will take place in the Bush House during the afternoon.

Ice Cream.

The ladies of the temperance restaurant, or "Holly Tree Inn," have determined to adopt the suggestion of the NEWS in regard to adding ice cream to the bill-of-fare provided at that establishment, and will have that delicious edible on hand to-morrow evening and hereafter will continue to supply it one evening of each week. Now, that there are no festivals or other attractions to take the attention of the community in another direction, it is expected that there will be a large number of persons at the "Holly Tree Inn" to-morrow evening. The ice cream will doubtless be excellent as the caterer of the establishment is well versed in the business. The ladies believe that their efforts should meet with greater encouragement than has heretofore been the case and we heartily agree with them.

The Responsibility of Public Depositaries.

At Washington, on the 7th inst., Judge Lawrence, the first comptroller of the treasury, rendered an opinion which is of importance to depositaries and disbursing officers. The assistant treasurer at Boston addressed a letter to him stating that there were many informalities and irregularities in the endorsement of pension checks, and that the usage of banks was to pay checks upon the endorsement of the payee and a known responsible bank, and he enquired whether checks, when endorsed by the payee and finally by the bank presenting them, were sufficiently endorsed so as to authorize payment. The comptroller has rendered an opinion, in which he says that a public depositary makes payment of checks at his own peril and risk, and if he pays a check the endorsement of which is forged or unauthorized the loss will fall upon him. The liability of the depositary does not rest on an implied contract of bailment, so that he would be relieved from liability by the exercise of ordinary diligence and care, but it rests on the express contract found in his bond, which makes him responsible for the payment of all moneys entrusted to his care to the parties rightfully entitled thereto.

How to Preserve a Bouquet.

When you receive a bouquet sprinkle it with fresh water; then put it into a vessel containing soap suds, which nourish the roots and keep the flowers as good as new. Take the bouquet out of the suds every morning and put it in fresh water; keep it there a few minutes and then take it out and sprinkle the flowers lightly by the hand with pure water. Replace the bouquet in soap suds, and the flowers will bloom as fresh as when gathered. The soap suds need to be changed every third day. By observing these rules, a bouquet may be kept bright and beautiful for at least one month, and will last longer in a very passible state; but the attention to the fair but frail creatures as directed above must be strictly observed, or "the last rose of summer" will not be "left blooming alone," but will perish.—Ex.

—The residents of Pine Grove were somewhat alarmed by a fire which broke out in the summer house attached to Mr. Lawrence Thomas' residence at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning, the 9th instant. All the members of Mr. Thomas' family were asleep at the time and the flames were discovered by two men who were passing, but too late to save the summer house or any of its contents, which consisted of two heaters, clothes wringers and all the necessary apparatus of such a department and was quite valuable. A dog confined in the building was also burned to death. The flames were without difficulty prevented from communicating with the main building. It is supposed that the fire originated in an ash barrel.

—The distance along the railroad between the race bridge and the mill of Duncan, Hale & Co. is a first class place to—kill cows. Grass grows between the railroad and the race the entire distance, and although there are notices not to venture on the railroad, the poor, innocent animals cannot read them and they will wander on the track. The first intelligence that our citizens may expect to receive regarding their valuable cows is that a passing engine has sent one of them to that happy land where they won't be obliged to give milk for human consumption. The citizen need not be surprised, either, but rather regard it as remarkable that such an accident did not happen long before.

—We regret to learn that several aged residents of Milesburg are quite ill, among the number being Mrs. J. B. Bullock, Mrs. Adams, wife of Dr. Adams, and Mr. Isaac Buffington, ex-county Treasurer. Mr. B's condition is considered quite dangerous. He is over seventy years of age and cannot expect to survive the painful disease of which he is now the victim, although every possible effort to relieve him has been made, among which was a trip to Philadelphia and a skillful operation performed by Dr. Agnew, the late President Garfield's physician.

—A gay party of young folks made a trip to the Spring Mills hotel on Wednesday for the pleasure of dancing and other enjoyable recreations. Among the number were Mr. George Brew, Mr. Lane and wife, and Miss Gephart. The trip to Spring Mills was made successfully and much pleasure derived from the visit. Their return was somewhat delayed by the rain of Wednesday night, but the early hours of Thursday morning found them safe in Bellefonte much delighted with the Spring Mills hotel and all that pertains to it.

—Excellent hay-making weather.

14 27 3t Administrator.

Frank P. Blair.

I have just received the Largest, Finest, and in every way the Best Stock of ever offered in this town. I can show you ware heavier in the metal, finer in the finish, with more weight of silver to the square inch than you ever saw before. I am now buying nothing less than which is a grade heavier than any other. But one of the most important items relating to these goods is the price I can sell them at. Taking the exclusive sale of them in this county enables me to buy large quantities. Large quantities entitles me to the lowest prices and largest rebates. Giving you these advantages enables you to buy these fine goods, never higher, and sometimes lower than the most common goods which are entitled to be called silverware.

Silver Ware

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

Miss Sue Campbell, of Pine Grove Mills, Instantaneously Cured After an Illness of Twenty Years.

We have often heard and read of miraculous cures through the power of prayer, but had no faith in them; for, although a believer in special providences, we did not think that God chose to work by miracles to hasten the operation of nature in these latter days; but Monday morning a case in point was related to us by a responsible resident of this place of a lady of prominence, who has been afflicted during the last twenty years with spinal disease, who was instantaneously cured a few days ago by what she firmly believed was the power of prayer.

Miss Sue Campbell, the lady who rejoices in new-found health and strength, is about 45 years of age. She has been confined to her bed since 25 years old, unable to move except when supported by a brace and using crutches when attempting to walk. During that time she has not been out of the house. She was never heard to complain, but bore all her sufferings with heroic patience and fortitude. Her case became well known, and she was visited by hundreds of prominent Christian people, who would resort to her bedside to learn lessons of Christian humility. She had tried all human remedies and consulted physicians of eminent abilities, all of whom left her bedside without giving her any relief.

Then she resorted to the Great Physician as her only hope. "Why will not the prayer of faith save the sick even now?" she questioned, and resolved to try. Writing to her numerous Christian friends in Philadelphia and other places, among whom are many prominent people, she requested them to unite upon a designated hour of a certain day in prayer that her illness might be cured. Of course, they consented to do so, and the patient sufferer waited in confident expectation. When the hour drew near she requested her friends to remove her brace and crutches, saying the prayers would not be answered if she attempted to use these earthly supports. Our informant says that the important day arrived during the first week of July, (the exact date he does not remember). When the hour arrived her face wore a look of perfect confidence, and to the great amazement and joy of all her friends she arose from her bed as naturally as a person in full health. The scenes and incidents of that moment must have been wonderful, and earnest thanks ascended to the throne of grace for her remarkable cure. She immediately started off to visit an aged relative, Mrs. Mary Campbell, mother of Henry Campbell, County Commissioner, who was of course delighted to see her. On Sunday morning, the 9th instant, she went to the Presbyterian church at Graysville, the first time she had been permitted that privilege since her illness.

We are aware that there are other ways of accounting for this cure aside from the intervention of the prayers in Miss Campbell's behalf, but the recovered lady and her numerous friends will always attribute it to that and to nothing else.

Death of Philip Williams.

The great enemy of the race—Death—has visited another of the homes of Centre county and removed from it its honored head. In the midst of the harvest season we are made to feel the presence of the great Harvester. Happy are we if when he comes the golden grain is ready to be cut down and gathered into the garner of the Husbandman.

Philip Williams died at his home near Port Matilda, on Friday night, the 14th instant, at about 10 o'clock. His wife died about four years ago and he was left without her companionship to bless his declining years, but with quite an army of children who had grown to be men and women. He was the father of nine children—six sons and three daughters—all but one, a daughter, surviving him. Mr. Aaron Williams, ex-prothonotary, and now prothonotary's clerk, is a son.

He was a devout and consistent member of the Baptist church and a zealous supporter of religion. He attended church, as was his custom, on the Sunday morning previous to his death.

Apoplexy was the disease which caused his death, the stroke which proved fatal being the third he had received.

On Sunday quite a large number of persons went from Bellefonte to attend the funeral which took place at Port Matilda at 12 o'clock. It was attended by a large concourse of people.

—The English Lutheran Sunday-school of Lock Haven, will picnic at Snow Shoe on Thursday of next week, July 27.

The "Holly Tree Inn."

The following statement is from a gentleman much interested in the affairs of the enterprise of which it treats and we recommend it to the consideration of our readers. He says:

The "Holly Tree Inn" has been in operation for over four months, and we believe has been fulfilling the purpose for which it was established.

It furnishes wholesome and nourishing food at very low prices where there is no temptation to drink intoxicating liquors; and, in addition to this, we have a free reading room which is comfortably furnished and is supplied with some very good reading matter, to which, however, additions are very desirable.

We had fully intended to subscribe to some of the daily papers, but thus far our means have not allowed it.

Up to this time we have nearly met our expenses by the aid of some acceptable contributions. But just now, when, as a matter of course, there is not so great a demand for such articles as we supply, we are passing through rather discouraging times, increased very much by the rise in prices of nearly all the articles we use.

With the experience we have had and the encouragement from some who have tried our soup and coffee, we feel it right, before contemplating the discontinuance of the undertaking, to lay the matter before the public, that we may have the advantage of their advice and encouragement if it is thought best to continue.

It cannot be expected that an enterprise of this kind should be self sustaining, but with voluntary contributions, let them be ever so small, we think we can succeed, and feel sure that this establishment will prove a blessing to this community.

It has been our aim to supply hot coffee and sandwiches in time for the early train, but if persons leaving town in that train would give their order the evening before we would be pleased to provide hot breakfast for them. We think this would be an accommodation to our friends and at the same time a source of benefit to ourselves.

What Colonel Coburn Said.

The following is what Colonel Coburn, of this county, told the members of the Republican Committee, who met in Philadelphia on Wednesday. He is reported as follows by the papers of that city:

"The Republicans of Centre county," said Colonel Coburn, "who feel a natural pride in General Beaver, the standard bearer of their party, are united and thoroughly in earnest in the present campaign. There are no differences with them. All honor General Beaver. They believe, however, rather in the success of the Republican party than the support of any single man, and they are desirous of doing anything honorable to secure harmony in the Republican party. I hope, therefore," continued Colonel Coburn, "that the judgment of the committee will lead it to adopt the most generous propositions that can be framed. General Beaver's friends have no fears for him, but count on the fullest and freest expression of the party will. They believe him to be the choice of ninety-nine one-hundredths of the Republicans of Pennsylvania, but whether that be true or not, they are willing to submit that question to the purest test that can be devised." Colonel Coburn concluded by outlining various propositions which he thought would be judicious to make to the Independents. The speech of Colonel Coburn, coming from the representative of the Gubernatorial candidate's own county, created a marked impression, and paved the way for the subsequent adoption of the harmony propositions, which were practically outlined in his remarks.

—A jolly German, who was on the early train Friday morning, made a remark that would have "brought down the house" had there been any house to bring down. As is was, he drew forth laughter from the crowd. As usual, the attaches of the Brockerhoff House were at the train, shouting the merits of their hotel. "Brockerhoff House!" they exclaimed in their most vociferous manner. "What town do you say this is?" asked our German friend of one of the dusky sons of Africa who was thus making use of his lungs. "Brock'hoff House!" again called out the darkey, paying no attention to the man's question and thinking only of his hotel. As is often the case in pronouncing the name of that hotel, he omitted the second syllable and pronounced the final syllable as if spelled "huff." "Broke-up town," ejeculated the German in disgust; "I won't stop here then, as I am already about as much broke up as it is possible for a man to be!" He settled back in his seat, determined to go on to the next town before alighting.

—The attendants of the Sunday-school at Valentines' forge held their annual picnic last Saturday, the residents of that vicinity joining in the pleasures of the occasion. It was held in the woods near the forge.

Philipsburg Pickings from the "Journal."

Miss Sallie Bolinger left this morning for a few weeks visit to Bellefonte and Rock Springs, and expects to visit other places before her return.

Our city, as in everything else, is fast coming to the front in regard to bicycling, and Messrs. George Ganoe, Rob't F. Mull and C. H. Davis are, without doubt, the champion bicyclists of this section. On last Tuesday evening the three gentlemen named started from this city about 9 o'clock, went to within three miles of Kylertown, a distance of almost 7 miles, and returned, arriving here at seven minutes of eight o'clock, having been but one hour and fifty-three minutes in making the fourteen miles—being an average of one mile in 8 minutes. Who can beat it?

Milton Evans, son of the Rev. J. W. Evans, of this city, who has been attending college at Lewisburg, Pa., during the past winter, graduated with great honors at the close of the session on June 28, he having received the first prize in Psychology and and moral ethics. We heartily congratulate our young townsman on his well deserved honors.

An effort is being made to establish a German Reformed church in this city, services having been held last Sabbath evening for that purpose with encouraging success.

The Rev. C. L. Streamer, according to announcement, held services in the Union church on last Sabbath for the purpose of seeing what action could be taken in regard to the starting of a Lutheran church in this city. A goodly number of persons were present, and it was decided to establish the Church, nearly thirty members having been enrolled. The first services are expected to be held on Sabbath a week, July 23.

President George W. Atherton.

The Pennsylvania State College, one of the most widely advertised schools of this or any other age, has a real President, and if representations are correct he is a gentleman who will lead the institution on to fame and fortune in quick metre. He has recently been in town and in company with Judge John H. Orvis visited the school, expressing his intense and unqualified approval of all he saw and heard. He has been an instructor in Rutgers' College, N. J., from which he will separate himself as soon as possible, though he may possibly be obliged to spend part of the autumn session at Rutgers, pending the selection of his successor there.

Prof. Atherton, in addition to his qualifications as a pedagogue, was a soldier, leaving his class at Yale to enter the army, serving throughout the famous Burnside expedition, and again entering Yale to complete his college course, whence he graduated with distinguished honors. He has since devoted himself to teaching.

He is also a thorough agriculturist, spending his life on a farm until 18 years of age. This, with an extensive experience in the Illinois Industrial University and also in the Rutgers' Scientific School, having been for years a member of the New Jersey Board of Agriculture and made a study of the workings of industrial colleges, gives promise of excellent and successful work in his new position.

The new president enters upon his duties with the enthusiastic support of all the trustees, the faculty and the alumni.

The Centre County Sabbath-School Association

Belongs to the Sunday-school workers of all denominations in Centre county.

Its records for the last twenty years show that every denomination without exception has been actively represented in the offices and duties of the association. It is the only organization in the county that offers to all, without distinction, an opportunity for mutual conference in reference to the one work of Bible study and teaching.

Many witnesses will cheerfully testify that the Conventions and Institutes held by the Association have been very delightful occasions.

The thirteenth annual convention is expected to be held August 17th, in the Centre Hill Presbyterian church. It is intended to make this meeting a point of interest, if possible, a little in advance of any similar meeting yet held in the county. All preachers are delegates ex-officio without appointment or special invitation. Particulars with regard to the convention will soon be made public. C.

—W. D. Blackburn, State agent of the State Constitutional Temperance Amendment Association, addressed the people of Port Matilda on the M. E. church at that place in the evening of the 14th instant. He was successful in organizing a branch society with Rev. L. W. Stahl, president; Rev. G. B. Ague, secretary, and J. G. James, treasurer.

"A Big Vote for Beaver."

A gentleman of this place was passing down the railroad a few days ago, when he was met by a burly son of Erin's Isle. Being of a communicative disposition, he carelessly interrogated the Irishman as follows:

"Halloo! Where do you live?"

The Irishman did not reply immediately, but looked at his questioner as if to ask an explanation. His answer showed that he has lived long enough in America to answer one question by asking another:

"Oh, you'r an assessor, are you?" said he; "be sure you put my name down this year."

"Why are you more desirous of being assessed this year than at other times?" answered the young man, also puzzled.

"Because I want to put in a big vote for Beaver," responded the man.

It may be stated in this connection that the gentleman alluded to has been taking an interest in the political situation and is amazed at the large number of Democrats who express a determination to vote for Beaver.
